Annapolis: An Imagined Community

An archaeology exhibit featuring artifacts never before displayed in a single, comprehensive exhibit!

ANNAPOLIS - Celebrating three centuries of African American and European heritage, the Banneker-Douglass Museum is hosting this exhibition as our way of commemorating the 300th Anniversary of the signing of Annapolis' Royal Charter. We are celebrating the quest for liberty!

Death's Head on loan from the Historic Annapolis Foundation's HistoryQuest!

Called the Death's Head, this piece of printer's type was excavated at the Jonas Green House in Annapolis. It was used to protest the Stamp Act in 1765.

The artifacts on display were discovered at five sites in historic downtown Annapolis: the Jonas Green House, the Brice House, the Governor Calvert House, the Maynard-Burgess House, and Reynolds Tavern.

Banneker-Douglass Museum is also sponsoring a self-guided cell phone tour of Seeking Liberty, including these five sites. This tour will be available as a podcast on the exhibit's website.
